

AMACO KILN ICE GLAZES

These glazes are modeled after traditional Guan or Snowflake glazes. They feature a delicate network of fine hairline cracks (known as "crazing"). While they are translucent, they become slightly opaque where the cracks form, creating a beautiful, multi-layered visual texture. Differences in glaze application and firing technique may affect your results. These glazes are technically food safe, but due to the crazed surface, do not use on areas that come in contact with food, (ie, rims of mugs, inside mugs, bowls, or plates). Applying Kiln Ice glazes thicker than traditional AMACO glazes is critical to achieving nice crackle patterns. Multiple brushed layers is better than one thick layer.
